Dear Sponsors & Friends,

We are pleased to announce that this year's Día de los Muertos Arts Festival will once again take place in the Tulsa Arts District on Friday, November 3, 2023. We selected this date as it coincides with the First Friday Art Crawl in the historic Tulsa Arts District. We are excited to continue co-hosting this community event alongside Casa de la Cultura and the Tulsa Drillers. Through our collaboration with Casa de la Cultura, we are pleased to provide a variety of culturally engaging virtual and on-site engagements. Details about this year's applications, programming, and schedule will be announced through Living Arts of Tulsa's social media and website.

One thing that remains the same is this event's ability to build bridges between the Latinx and non-Latinx communities in Tulsa, creating a way for Tulsans to pay homage and honor ancestors and friends who have passed on. The annual Día de los Muertos Arts Festival is one way that we shine a light on the cultures and traditions of our region. Historically, this is one of the largest multicultural festivals that happens in Tulsa, impacting more than 7,500 people and garnering an impressive 160,000 social media impressions. We are projecting to impact more than that this year through our virtual content, allowing engagement by both artists and patrons located near and far.

We can't do this work alone! Our goal is to continue to host this event without charging admission, removing all barriers to participate. We rely on supporters like you to help advance our mission. In return, we offer you the chance to collaborate with the Tulsa Arts District and engage with the Latinx communities throughout the Tulsa Area. Join us as a sponsor of this year's festival and align your mission with the image of this vibrant, family-friendly event.

Sincerely,

Living Arts of Tulsa
